It is now standing idle; the dam, or rather, the wood idle; the dam, or rather, the wood-work of the wasteway, gave way, and before the break was repaired, Colo-nel Murray, the owner, died, and nothing has been done since. I pre-sume that if some enterprising mill man, with a little cash in hand, were to happen along, he might do a good thing for himself and others. There are three setts of stones, and every-thing perfect for turning out sixty or thing perfect for turning out sixty or seventy barrels of flour per day.

Just now our hobby is a mineral spring, recently found near here. It possesses wonderful medicinal qualies; contains I don't know how many inerals, salts, or constituent el minerals, salts, or constituent ele-ments, and so much carbonic acid as to rival the Saratoga springs. The waters are a great diuretic. All the well and healthy visit the spring in person, and the sick send for the water. So soon as we shall have com-pleted a hotel, we expect to eclipse Raleigh, and rival the famous Hot Springs, of Arkansas, as a watering Springs, of Arkansas, as a watering place—the waters possessing greater virtue, and being more convenient of wirtue, and being more convenient of access—only one mile from the railroad and Galloway. The supply of water will be ample for a great company. The spring comes from Geep down in the bowels of the earth, with a rapid, unceasing flow. People here seem satisfied; no land for sale; prices all held at stiff rates.

Labor is plenty, on terms, I suppose, common all through the country; if furnished, hands get half for labor; if they furnish themselves, the landholder gets one-third.

Negroes are doing very well. Most of them are getting horses, cows and hogs around them, though through the summer they have not done as well as formerly, too much protracted meeting.

Cotton has been cut short near one-half from the hot, dry weather of Angust; nor is the turn-out in the staple so good as last year. Last year at this time, 1500 lbs. seed cotton would make a 506 lb. bale; whereas, would make a 506 lbs, bate; whereas, this season, 1800 lbs, is required for a bale same weight.

There is much complaint with farmers that the weights of cotton do not hold out. Speaking for myself, I shipped five bales of cotton to a Front street house, weighed the day it was shipped, on a pair of Fairbanks' scales, which was sold the next week, and the loss was only 240 lbs, on the
